

Skidaddles win Tristate Success Award

Skidaddles, a locally owned childcare center with a unique drop-in concept, has been recognized with Cincy Magazine's 2011 Tristate Success Award for Emerging Companies.

The winning businesses were honored at the Cintas Center at Xavier University with a dinner and presentation by keynote speaker Bob McDonald, president and CEO of Procter and Gamble.

Cincy's Tristate Success Awards honor companies in the eight-county, three-state region that grew in revenue and employees.

The awards were founded on the premise that the Tristate's strength as a thriving business center is built on the growth and success of its businesses.

Skidaddles brings a new concept in childcare to the area with its unique top quality flexible childcare with extended hours. Parents can use the drop-in services with no reservation or commitment. Skidaddles strives to provide a safe and secure environment that is educational and fun for kids and allows parents the free time they need for work or pleasure.

Mike and Tiffany Sams are owners of the childcare centers.

Skidaddles has been open for almost three years at its Florence location and opened in Mason, Ohio, on April 11.
